Costello, Starr debate today; TV and radio broadcasts tonight

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, and Republican challenger Mike Starr of Carbondale will be given the opportunity to take off the gloves for a no-holds-barred, face-to-face match today.

"We're planning to have a very free-wheeling, fast-paced discussion that goes beyond the average sound-bite," said David Kidd, senior producer at WSIU-TV in Carbondale, where the debate will be filmed.

"The candidates will not be constrained by a rigid, debate-style format. We expect a lively, spontaneous kind of discussion where candidates can address

Salvation Army chairman quits over dispute

By Martin Richter
Staff writer

The chairman of the Salvation Army's Collinsville Service Unit angrily resigned last week over a dispute with the unit in Granite City involving funds raised in the local Tree of Lights campaign.

The Rev. Paul Fuessel Jr. said he resigned Thursday afternoon during a meeting at the Bluff Road McDonald's with the Rev. R.E. George, service extension director for the Salvation Army's Midland Divisional Headquarters in St. Louis. The resignation is effective this Friday, he said.

Earlier this year, Fuessel announced that the Collinsville Service Unit would take over the Tree of Lights campaign in Collinsville. The campaign for years had been handled by the Salvation Army of Madison County, based in Granite City.

The car hit the house across the street, causing structural damage to the home, according to a police report.

A 17-year-old woman who was in the home was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center, where she was treated for minor injuries and released. Skid marks in the path of Mendoza's vehicle were measured at 33 feet. Mendoza refused medical attention for minor injuries, the report states.

Fire

"Tragically, two guys lost their lives because of the inability of the system to deal with that situation," Wallace said.

If the owner of a dangerous and unsafe building is unwilling to take responsibility for it, building officials should see that the building is quickly condemned and demolished, Wallace said.

Wallace said similar dilapidated structures exist in Granite City, and it may be only a matter of time before a tragedy like the one in Alton happens here. While the Granite City Fire Department will not compromise its responsibility to protect property, Wallace said, the tragedy in Alton puts values into perspective.

There isn't a building in this town that is worth getting somebody hurt — or more important, getting somebody killed. The only time a firefighter should lay his life on the line is when another life is threatened," Wallace said.

"Buildings can be replaced. That precious gift of life cannot be replaced."

Flags at the Granite City fire stations flew at half-staff early in the week in honor of Porter and Lewis.

Granite City firefighters joined those from across the country and Canada in Alton on Tuesday to mourn the Alton department's first firefighting deaths. Nearly 50 trucks from the area joined a procession through Upper Alton.

Costello likes debate format

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

A free-flowing face-to-face discussion is the type of discussion preferred by U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, so he is looking forward to today's debate with Republican challenger Mike Starr.

"There are some questions that can be answered in one sentence, but others need five or 10 minutes or more," said Brian Lott, Costello's campaign manager.

"This format, without time limits and with the ability of the candidates and moderator to jump in, should be a good opportunity for people to see the candidates in action and hear what they plan to do."

Lott said Costello would probably concentrate on the same issues Costello has stressed throughout the campaign: Jobs and economic development in the 12th Congressional District. Lott said health care should also be an issue at the debate.

"I think this will also be an opportunity for the candidates to talk about their record," Lott said. "While Mike Starr doesn't have a record of public service, he does have a record of sorts and that record will be compared to Congressman Costello's record of four years of staying in touch with his home district and bringing home federal services and tax dollars to the district."

Lott said he believes everyone will benefit from the direct comparison of candidates in an atmosphere that is unstaged and without strict rules.

"Voters will be presented with a clear choice. Voters will see where Congressman Costello stands on the issues they believe are most important and how he differs from Mike Starr," Lott said.

Seniors offer road rules class Friday

The Granite City Council of Senior Citizens is offering a Rules of the Road review course Friday for all residents of the Granite City area. The course is free to everyone, any age, who wishes to attend.

The two-hour course is designed to answer questions about the Rules of the Road and to assist participants in preparation for examination. Topics include written, vision and road tests.

The Rules of the Road course will be from 9 to 11 a.m. Friday, at the Granite City Township Building, 2060 Delmar Ave. For more information call 877-4373.

Starr wants debate to focus on differences

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Republican challenger Mike Starr hopes tonight's debate allows him to focus on issues he says define the differences between him and incumbent U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello.

Starr and Costello, candidates in the newly-created 12th Congressional District, are to square off in a 30-minute debate tonight in Carbondale.

Starr's campaign manager, Gary Wolf, said he hopes the debate affords the candidates an opportunity to focus on the issues on which Starr and Costello differ.

"The three major areas on which Mike and Congressman Costello differ are jobs and the economy, balancing the budget and cutting the deficit, and congressional reform," Wolf said.

A former broadcaster and currently a journalism professor at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Starr has attacked Costello's voting record on issues ranging from congressional campaign reform to alleged abuse in mailing privileges to killing an investigation into alleged misconduct in the House Post Office.

Wolf characterized Costello as a "1980s-type politician," and said the incumbent has relied heavily in his campaign on public-works programs he has helped bring to the district.

"That's just fine, but the district itself isn't in such great shape," Wolf said.

He said Starr will also focus on the Madison and St. Clair counties "Democratic political machine," which he said is "anti-democratic in nature." He said money and political influence tend to win area elections rather than candidates' stands on issues.

Haunting Halloween: Readers show writing talent in essays

A couple of weeks ago, Granite City Journal readers were asked to get into the Halloween holiday spirit and finish a story for the lifestyle page.

More than 40 aspiring authors tried their hands at getting Jack O'Brien through that frightening Halloween night.

In addition to many individual efforts, classes at Wilson School and East-Alton-Wood River High School participated. Printed below are the best that the Journal had space to print.

The original story begins with O'Brien's aircraft crashing into a field of trees, seconds after he radioed a quick SOS. The pilot survived the crash and he staggered from the wreckage, trying to find help.

He came to a large old house on a hill. The house was completely empty except for a jack-o-lantern in the window. No one answered when Jack knocked on the door, but the door was unlocked, so he went in.

The nightmare had only just begun.

Untitled
By Carol Warren
of Granite City

Sitting in a rocker with only the light of the moon shining dimly was the image of a woman with white-streaked hair and an old ragged shawl.

She lifted her head. Her eyes glared at him like two shining bursts of fire in the moonlight.

"Welcome and come closer," she said in a cracked voice.

He couldn't move. Her face was wrinkled and hollow like a witch from a movie. She arose and moved toward him. He then saw blood on her hands. He took a breath and ran.

He entered a room off the hall. He stood there as quietly as he could. A voice behind him said, "Welcome."

He turned and raising off the bed was a skeletal thin man looking like he had just risen from his grave. Jack was shaking so badly he didn't know how he managed to move, but he ran out of that room and down the hall to the kitchen.

Jack was desperate for a way out. He was scared and shaking. Suddenly, out of his fright he saw a glimmer of light out the window. It was a fire outside.

He found the back door and ran out toward the fire. He could see figures around the fire as he got closer.

He hoped for someone to help him, for he was frightened and hurt. Jack called out and the figures turned, only to be hideous monsters. Where was he? How would he get out of there?

Suddenly, a hand grabbed his shoulder. He shook in horror.

"Are you OK? Are you hurt badly?"

Jack turned and saw a jolly looking fellow with concern in his face. "I heard your SOS and went to investigate. I found the wreckage of the plane, but no pilot. Are you him?"

Jack's fright turned to relief and he said, "Yes, I am."

"I'm glad you're OK," said the man, "but let's go inside and see how badly you've been hurt."

"Wait a minute," said the man in a laughing voice.

Jack couldn't understand his strange reaction.

"I'm sorry I'm laughing, but let me explain. I've been up here working on a house of horrors for the local town's Halloween night. I'm sorry you were so scared, but I guess my little house of horrors is a bit...

A man and woman dressed in white coats and, deeply engrossed in conversation were standing next to a covered body on a hospital cart.

Although Jack was not close enough to discern much of the conversation, he did overhear them calling each other Hilda and Charles.

Charles was saying something about a lab as they left the room, pushing the cart into a dark corridor.

His heart was pounding so fiercely that he was having difficulty breathing. After waiting what seemed like an endless minute, Jack stopped it was suddenly quiet. He proceeded with caution and saw a brightly lit room ahead.

He crept toward the opening and hid behind the door. Peering through the crack, Jack saw Charles and Hilda standing by the cart with surgical caps on their heads and rubber gloves on their hands.

Charles pulled back the sheet and began dissecting the corpse. Hilda put a container by his side and he carefully laid each piece inside.

While Charles continued the methodical carving, Hilda got several plastic bags out of a cabinet. She began placing a body part inside each bag, sealing it, and then writing information on the outside.

Jack's imagination was running rampant. Every evening experiment he had ever seen in horror films, or read about in science-fiction books was flashing through his mind. He was jolted back to reality when a door slammed.

Charles had apparently left the room through a rear exit and took that poor fellow's remains with him. Hilda placed all but one of the plastic bags in a freezer.

She picked up the last bag and was walking toward Jack. Jack held his breath and pressed against the wall as she walked past him and down the corridor; beads of perspiration were trickling down his face.

After the coast was clear, he decided to make his escape. However, once in the hallway, he was confused with all the turns involved; he was lost.

He continued groping his way down the hallways and growing very anxious, when he faintly heard some singing. The melody led him to a doorway that was slightly ajar; there stood Hilda, preparing a bloody piece of meat on the counter was an empty, blood-stained plastic bag. Jack was mortified when the realization sunk in that they were cannibals. He had started to turn and run when everything went black.

Jack was awakened by a woman's voice. He hesitated to respond, but he raised his head slowly, opened his eyes and beheld the most beautiful sight in the world—his mother.

He looked around the room and discovered he was home and in his bed. It was just a nightmare.

Jack's mother cheerfully wished him a happy Halloween and asked him what he wanted for breakfast. Jack replied, "Anything will do, but please, no meat this morning."

"Halloween Night"
By Ronald Shafer
Wilson School, grade 6

His eyes nearly popped out of his head when he saw around the corner a headless person wearing the same clothes he was wearing.

When he went to turn the body over, he freaked out because it was him. He looked up and saw a hole in the ceiling. He became very scared.

He started to walk around the house, searching each room to see if he could find out what happened in the house. He found nothing in the kitchen, living room, family room and bathroom.

He went up the stairs and found nothing in the hallway, bathrooms and bedrooms. He went back down to the kitchen to get something to eat. He then went into the living room to watch television. He decided to search around the house some more.

He decided to search the basement but found nothing but old junk. He found an old wine cellar.

He went back upstairs and decided to live in the house. He cleaned the entire upstairs and went down to the basement clean. After he cleaned the basement, he went to the library to rest. He fell asleep because he was very tired from cleaning.

Not knowing that it was Halloween night, he saw himself headless, from the plane wreck. He had jumped out of the plane, went through the roof and cut his head off.

To this day, he still does not know he is the ghost of Jack O'Brien.

"The Lucky Guy"

It was a bunch of guards dog. He turned and started running, but which way should he go?

There was a bunch of ways, but he just ran straight. He ran faster and faster, but it seemed like the dogs were running really fast and he was running in slow motion.

Everywhere he turned, it was just like what he had pin through. Just then he plunged to the ground.

the floor. Then he saw the dogs coming for him. They all took a flying leap. They were almost on top of him. Just then he woke up.

He had been unconscious from the wreck. There were two people there. They said, "Are you all right? Get him up. Come on, let's go to the hospital."

They got him in their car and rushed him to the hospital. They brought him in.

There was a doctor there and they said he had been in a plane wreck. So the doctor took him into his office.

For half an hour, the people were waiting in the waiting room. The doctor came out and said, "He has a broken arm and a couple of nice bruises, but other than that he's all right."

"Good," the people said. "We were worried." Then they got in their car and took him home.

"Thank you. Thank you for everything you did for me. I will never forget it."

They all said goodbye and then he went into the house. He went into the bathroom and looked into the mirror and could not believe he was still alive after what had happened.

He reached and turned on the cold water and splashed some on his face, turned it off and went to bed.

The next morning, he got up and got dressed and then ate breakfast. He walked to the park to see his plane. When he got to the park, there was a lady standing there, staring at the plane.

Jack looked at the plane and said, "My plane, my plane."

The lady said, "Were you the one that wrecked the plane?"

"Yes," he said.

They talked for a while and then ended up going to lunch. Well, things led to things and then, two years later, they got married and had a baby. And they lived happily ever after.

Study finds rise in number of local children living in poverty

SPRINGFIELD — Metro East social workers and teachers say they are not surprised at a report that says more local children are living in poverty than a decade ago.

The report card issued Tuesday by Voices for Illinois Children, a child advocacy group, claims the state is "failing our children." It also says that spending on education is inadequate.

"I worry about what we are doing to the kids. They are our future, and I'm truly concerned about the generation coming to be," said Catherine Wahl, a special education teacher at Alton High School.

The stress on children is a result of a poor economy, and the fact shows up in local programs for poor children, said Chuck Parr, vice president of Family Service and Visiting Nurse Association, based in Alton.

For each of the past two years, almost 1,000 children have applied for the 530 spots open in FSNA's Project Head Start program.

"They all qualify under income guidelines, and it's really difficult to have to turn children down," Parr said.

The report also says that in four of five area counties, the average spent per public school pupil is below what a state task force considered adequate.

The report includes an average amount spent per student in each county, compared with the $4,000 a state Board of Education task force recently suggested for an adequate education.

The average for Madison County schools in the year that ended last June was $3,833; for Macoupin County, $3,295; for Jersey County, $3,255; for Greene County, $3,642; and for Calhoun County, $4,454.

While the problems are the result of a poor economy, they will also contribute to a poor economy in the future as underserved children fail to grow up to be productive citizens, Wahl said. "I really feel that. We can pay now, or we pay much more later," she said.

The group, Voices for Illinois Children, which lobbies to benefit children, unveiled the first year of a four-year project to provide "key facts about Illinois children."

"It's a lousy report card," said Nancy Stevenson, chief executive officer of the Voices organization.

The study used 1990 census information and reports from state agencies to look at changes roughly in the past decade affecting children.

In the five area counties, the report generally indicates the number of children living in poverty and on welfare has climbed along with the number of children born to single teen mothers.

"People are being parents, but they don't know how to be," Wahl said. She said many teens become pregnant just to have a baby that will provide love which they don't get from neglecting parents.

In Madison County, the number of children living in poverty jumped from 8,763 in 1979 to 10,190 in 1989, the report says.

In 1989, 16.3 percent of the children in Madison County lived in poverty compared with 12.7 percent a decade earlier, the report says.

The number of Madison County children on welfare climbed to 8,889, or 12.6 percent in 1990, compared with 8,486 or 11.4 percent in 1980.

Cancer patients celebrate life

Oncology Care Center — an outpatient cancer facility located at 4000 North Illinois in Belleville — hosted its sixth annual Celebrate Life! Picnic Oct. 4 on the grounds of the facility from noon to 4 p.m. Big Band music was the theme of this year's picnic. Over 300 persons attended the event this year making it the largest picnic crowd ever in the center's history.

"The picnic is an upbeat way of helping our patients and their families forget about cancer," said John F. Akse, administrator of the center, of showing them that there is life despite cancer. Entertainment included an 11-piece big band orchestra, "The Blue Knights," professional amateur dance groups, clowns, a juggler, and face painters. Flora — the mascot of the center — was also present, taking with the young and young at heart. Oncology Care Center is affiliated with St. Louis Healthcare Services Inc. and St. Louis Health Services, Inc.

Grant will help defray cost of IP's scrubbers

The Department of Energy and Natural Resources (ENR) recently executed a $35 million grant offer to Illinois Power to help pay for the installation of air pollution control scrubbers at the utility's Baldwin power station.

The grant will help defray the cost of the scrubbers and enable the utility to continue to be a major consumer of Illinois coal under new clean air rules.

Earlier this month, officials with Illinois Power indicated their intention to delay the $250-$300 million scrubber project.

"It is very important to the local economy and to Illinois rate payers that Illinois Power not delay this pollution control project," said ENR Director John S. Moore. "We believe the cost for Illinois Power to implement alternatives to the scrubber project are more expensive and would likely disrupt the local economy."

In 1991, Illinois Power supported amendments to the Public Utilities Act stipulating that the company install two scrubbers at the Baldwin power station to comply with the federal Clean Air Act. To help offset the cost of installing the scrubbers, the state of Illinois authorized a $35 million grant to the company. As part of the agreement, the Public Utilities Act was amended to specifically guarantee that Illinois Power can recover its cost for scrubber installation.

County seeks control over trash hauling

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

A resolution passed Wednesday by the Madison County Board seeks federal legislation that would give state and local governments more control over trash hauling.

"We need to come up with a definition that is legal and at the same time addresses the problem," said Richard "Dick" Worthen, D-Alton.

Worthen is chairman of the board's Environmental Control Committee.

The resolution, similar to one passed in St. Clair County, cites "serious disposal problems" for state and local governments with solid waste transportation under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"The way the interstate commerce laws are written, states cannot restrict garbage from going one place or another," said Joe Parente, Madison County Building, Zoning and Environmental Control administrator. "Without a change, the problem that affected St. Clair County — the trash train — could happen here."

A train carrying 2,500 tons of garbage from New York spent nearly a week in July at a Conrail switching yard in Fairmont City while court hearings were held to keep the train from going into a Stanton landfill. A St. Clair County judge, citing numerous EPA violations, eventually ordered the train to move on.

Parente said the biggest problem with out-of-state trash is that it takes up space needed for local trash. Because of Environmental Protection Agency requirements enacted in September, Madison County has already lost one of its three landfills. An Alton landfill closed in the wake of the new laws which would have cost the company thousands of dollars to comply with, Parente said.

The Chain of Rocks landfill, operated by Waste Management, has about nine years left until it reaches capacity and Laidlaw's landfill near Edwardsville is already near capacity. However, a pending expansion permit would give the landfill about another decade of use, Parente said.

One of the ways to lengthen landfill life is to reduce solid waste. The county has already managed to recycle 14 percent of its current solid waste load and is required by state law to reach 15 percent by 1994. Parente said that shouldn't be a problem. What will be a challenge is for the county to meet the next state mandate that requires 25 percent recycling by 1996.

"As it stands right now, we're not going to meet that," Parente said. "We really have no facilities capable of processing that much material and making it economically workable."

However, Parente said that the county board will likely be deciding in the next two months whether or not to have a study done on building a recycling center. The study would explore the feasibility of a county managed facility versus one in the private sector, Parente said.

Parente said his department is also trying to educate the public by awarding solid waste management grants to cities and schools to start their own recycling programs. Several school programs are also used to teach children the importance of trash reduction.

The county is also working with groups like the Waste Reduction Action Coalition, WRAC, an Edwardsville based environmental group, has expanded throughout the county is currently holding training sessions for its members to help businesses throughout the county to reduce their solid waste.

It's a demo program that gets us into the commercial end of it," Parente said. "If they're successful, that may be the way to do it."

Coalition aims at reducing solid waste

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

One of the ways Madison County is trying to reduce the amount of its solid waste is through an Edwardsville-based environmental group.

The Waste Reduction Action Coalition, which began in Edwardsville in 1990, has now expanded to include all of Madison County. Through WRAC, Edwardsville is one of eight communities throughout the state to participate in the Model Community program. The program, started in 1989 by the Central States Education Center, certifies "model" homes, businesses, schools, hospitals and other sites that follow a specially designated program to reduce and eliminate waste.

Central States, a nonprofit organization based in Champaign, emphasizes the use of positive voluntary action in practicing waste prevention, the elimination of toxins, the purchase of recycled goods and waste exchange.

The group is now in the process of training 20 volunteers who will work with businesses throughout the county. Among the businesses to be targeted are the Alton Telegraph and Illinois Bell office in Alton; Fairmount Park Race Track, the Illinois Department of Transportation office and the Flower Basket in Collinsville; Anderson Hospital in Maryville; Farm Fresh in Edwardsville and Wal-Mart in Glen Carbon.

The group met Thursday night at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville for its third of five training sessions. A tour through one of the offices in the University Center made for an interesting lesson.

The trainees noted: a lack of encouragement to use double-sided copying; several pieces of paper that could have been reused as scrap paper or made into memo pads; envelopes that could have been reused had they been opened differently; and aluminum soda cans that can be recycled.

"This represents about $1,000 over the course of a year that could be saved by reusing every piece of paper," said John Thompson, director of Central States who is conducting the training. "The savings comes from not buying the paper to begin with."

Trainees also noted positive things, too. The office did have a stack of scrap paper and the typewriters used correction ribbons which avoids the use of white-out, a toxin.

The training, as well as the appointment of coordinator, Deena Kolb, is being paid for with a solid waste management grant from the Madison County Board. The group is working to help the county reach a state mandated goal of recycling 25 percent of generated solid waste by 1996.

For more information about WRAC, call Kolb at 238-3742 or Ginger McCall at 636-8122.

Agreement reached on Ohio River

Gov. Jim Edgar announced recently Illinois and Kentucky have reached an agreement making it easier for hunters and anglers on the Ohio River.

"Now anglers and hunters from both states have the opportunity to enjoy this scenic river, understanding that they need to abide by the fish and game rules of their home state," Edgar said. "I commend the natural resource agencies of Illinois and Kentucky for working together to resolve this important issue."

The interim agreement was signed by Brent Manning, director of the Illinois Department of Conservation and Don McCormick, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, who are responsible for enforcing fish and game laws in their respective states.

"The agreement is effective immediately and will remain in place until a permanent agreement can be negotiated," Manning said. "That will occur after the U.S. Supreme Court approves a boundary line agreed upon by both states, a process that could take more than a year."

The interim agreement calls for the states to recognize each other's hunting and fishing licenses when the main stem of the Ohio River is used, excluding bays and tributaries. It requires each hunter or angler to obey the regulations of his or her home state, such as the number of fish allowed to be caught daily, but allows both Illinois and Kentucky residents to hunt or fish the river whenever a season is open in either state.

The agreement also gives Illinois and Kentucky conservation law enforcement officials the right to inspect the licenses, bag limits and equipment of any person on the Ohio River.

The 133-mile Ohio River boundary between Illinois and Kentucky has been in dispute since Illinois became a state in 1818. Kentucky claimed all the river's width was within its borders and, except for those who stayed on shore, required Illinoisans who hunted and fished the Ohio to purchase a non-resident license and observe Kentucky fish and game regulations.

Illinois brought the dispute before the U.S. Supreme Court, which in May 1991 ruled that Illinois was entitled to a portion of the river. It ordered the case to be resolved through a Court-appointed special master, who is reviewing briefs submitted by both states.

Later, using U.S. Army Corps of Engineers maps from 1911-1914 to determine the low-water mark as it existed in 1792 when Kentucky became a state, the states will agree on the placement of the boundary line.

SIUE studying disabled accessibility problems

SIUE officials are studying accessibility problems for disabled students, thanks to an advocacy group that has found possible federal violations.

Robert Fleming, a student and advocate of the disabled, has presented officials with a 16-page report and pictures outlining problems in areas such as fire alarms and handrails.

Fire alarms with only audible warnings were listed as a top deficiency.

"If you had students with a hearing impairment sitting in the library, and a fire broke out, they would have no indication the building was on fire," Fleming said.

He also found problems with handrails that do not extend past the bottom step.

"It makes it dangerous for me. I need something to hold onto. If I miss the handrail, I go right down the steps," he said. Fleming is a junior psychology student and president of New Horizons, a group representing Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville's nearly 200 disabled students.

He said officials received his report positively and agreed to study problems and plan corrections. He added that SIUE was in better shape than most campuses.

"It's not that they don't want to fix things, it's the financial situation," he said.

Fleming submitted his report Oct. 2 at a meeting held by Vice President for Administration Benjamin Quillian and several other campus officials. Also attending was Richard Goodwin, executive director of IMPACT of Alton, which represents disabled interests.

Jenkins installed as organist

On Sunday, Jack Jenkins was installed as organist at First Presbyterian Church, 2160 Delmar, at the 10:30 a.m. Worship service.

Jack has had a long involvement in music, both in instrumental and vocal areas. He graduated from Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville with a degree in Organ Performance and Music Education. He is employed as national sales director for Wick's Pipe Organ Company, in Highland.

For 10 years Jack has been resident organist at the Fox Theater in St. Louis, and is also organist for the Scottish Rite Cathedral.

A native-born resident of Granite City, he and his wife, Melodee, reside at 2257 Cleveland Blvd.

In addition to his responsibilities as organist, he has had an impact on the lives of young people of the Quad-Cities through his association with them in the Quad City Gateway Youth Fellowship, Inc. He is the founder and director of that organization, which has given many performances both locally and out of town.

The group is known as "The Intercessors." Among their out-of-town appearances they have provided entertainment at Silver Dollar City in Branson, Mo., and at Six Flags.

Jack is past dean of the Gateway East Chapter of American Organ Guild of Organists.

Not only is Jack musically involved, but he and his wife are members of the Downtown Neighborhood Restoration Society, an organization whose members restore old homes in the downtown area of Granite City. He and his wife have had their home on display at the yearly Home Tour in December.

Jack Jenkins

Following the installation service, church members and guests at the community were invited to a reception in the church fellowship hall in his honor.

SIUE nursing school gets grants

The School of Nursing at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville has received two grants from the Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Nursing, totaling $376,109. Jacquelyn M. Clement, associate professor, and Jacquelyn W. Ryberg, assistant professor, have received $23,000 for "Nurse-Managed Center," the third year of funding for this program.

Nancy Creason, dean of the school, has received $343,043 for the first year of a three-year grant for a nurse-led program in nurse anesthesia.

The nurse-managed center, Community Nursing Services, is located in East St. Louis. The objectives of this program include increasing accessibility of nursing services to clients in a high-risk, underserved area; providing health education through the framework of health promotion, health maintenance and health restoration; facilitating development of client self-care skills; providing a setting conducive to nursing research among low income, ethnic/minorities; and providing a clinical practice/clinical teaching setting for faculty practice and student clinical experiences.

Currently, the nurse-managed center staff has completed an increased number of health screenings of Head Start children and will take on expanded activities for the coming year. The center works with clients of all ages and provides both undergraduate and graduate students with valuable experiences.

The purpose of the nurse anesthesia grant is to expand the master level program in anesthesiology. The goal of this effort will be to prepare nurse clinical specialists with expertise in managing patients receiving anesthesia.

IMSA plans informational meetings in area

The Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy (IMSA) has scheduled 50 informational meetings this winter for students, parents and community members to learn more about IMSA's academic, residential and admissions programs.

Located in Aurora, IMSA is the state's three-year (grades 10-12) public residential high school for talented mathematics and science students. The Academy also serves as an educational laboratory for developing and testing innovative programs to share with other school districts, teachers and students.

IMSA, which opened in 1966, now has an enrollment of 629 students representing all areas of the state. Illinois students enrolled in the equivalent of a ninth grade program are eligible to apply.

The Academy's curriculum features rigorous courses in mathematics, science, the arts and humanities.

Admissions counselors will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1993, at Collinsville Holiday Inn, 1000 Eastport Plaza Drive and at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 13, 1993, at Board of Education Building, 1005 State St., East St. Louis.

Japanese visit a memorable experience for teacher

Travelers Abroad members held their September dinner meeting at Jerry's Cafeteria with 25 members and four guests. Alice Purdes, president, welcomed the group and spoke of some interesting trips to be discussed during the coming year. A moment of silent prayer was observed for the late Elina Hoover, who served as secretary of the group for many years.

Members voted to re-elect the same officers and a new secretary for this year: Purdes, president; Helen Lilly, treasurer; Dorothy Hoedebeck, secretary; and Barbara Williams, publicity.

A narrated slide program, "Teaching in Japan," was presented by Purdes, who spent two weeks in August in Nakajo where Southern Illinois University at Carbondale has a campus. She was a guest of Catherine McHugh, Professor emerita at SIUC, who was completing a three-months' teaching assignment in which she trained Japanese students in English and music and prepared them for the tests that they had to pass before being allowed to come to the U.S. to study at SIUC.

Purdes and McHugh alternated for the two weeks in conducting or accompanying the 40 boys and girls during the music sessions. One of the slides indicated that Carbondale was 7,134 miles from Nakajo. Purdes flew on JAL from Chicago to the Tokyo-Narita airport, which took almost 13 hours. Since this was a personal visit, there was no guide to assist her, but she followed suggestions prepared by the SIUC staff; she rode a shuttle to the hotel but, instead of sleeping, she decided to take a 2 1/2 hour walking tour of Narita. The following morning she located the Narita express train and then successfully rode three different trains to her destination of Nakajo. Unable to read the train schedules, she judged departure and arrival times by continually checking her watch. The trains were always on time.

Many slides showed Japanese children and adults, both young and old raised their fingers, like the "V for Victory" sign, but Purdes never could determine the meaning of the gesture.

McHugh and Dorn, the head of the university, greeted her at the station. Despite previous trips to Japan, this was the first time she was in a private home. Shoes, of course, were left in the hallway. The bathroom facilities were quite different — each major part was in a separate room and in the room with the wash basin was the electric washing machine.

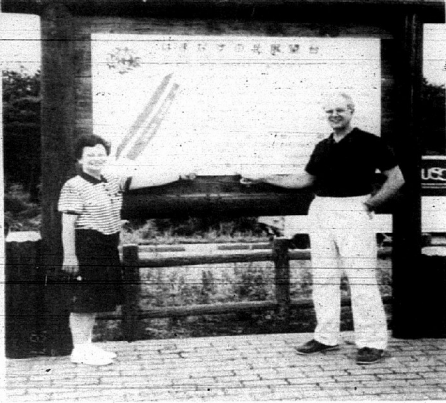

Other slides showed furnishings and the two ladies adapted several items to more Americanized uses. Some of the dinners to which they were invited featured the customary chopsticks.

Campus scenes showed wild flowers in bloom, a wall decorated with Japanese paintings which cleverly hid the sanitation area, the Stars and Stripes and the Rising Sun flags flying side by side, and a major building, Friendship Hall, the SIUC branch was established there in 1988 to promote international exchanges. Japanese high school students are educated and trained so they can continue their higher education in Carbondale.

A commonplace chalkboard found in the Board Room of Friendship Hall was very impressive. Upon writing on it and then pressing a button, a Xerox copy of the written material is printed out.

Slides were shown of the expansion underway for the college to include tennis courts, a swimming pool, a golf course on the side of a mountain and rolling sidewalks.

Purdes and McHugh participated in the graduation ceremonies and were delighted to be able to play on a huge ebony Yamaha concert grand piano. Representatives from SIUC awarded diplomas. Other slides showing the feast of Obon were shown where lanterns were lighted on Japanese graves for the holiday season. Drums and flute-like instruments provided the beat and high-pitched tones for the dancers and singers, many of whom were in native costumes. Later, mats were placed where the dancers had performed and many trays of food and drinks appeared, along with chopsticks. The festival participants were more interested in talking to Purdes and another SIUC faculty member than in eating. They kept saying "yes" to questions in Japanese that they did not understand.

Garages in this area resembled an arch-shaped tent, always bright green, with a flap to close after the car is inside. Telephones were also green.

Tours of the area indicated the extent of the Japanese fishing industry, the largest in the world. A special tour was made to the lacquer factory to see the time-consuming jobs of preparing the beautiful decorated lacquerware. Another trip was made to Nigata to see the Northern Culture Museum. Originally the home of the Ito family, this mansion and all the valuable art within was donated after the war to the museum through the assistance of a Captain

Wright from Peoria, who was the officer in charge of the occupation forces in the area.

Final slides showed the ovens on the JAL plane which would provide two hot meals during the 12 1/2 hour flight back to Chicago and some of the sleeping 331 passengers.

Guests present were Harry Parker, Frances Jones, Mildred King, and Nora King. Others in attendance not previously mentioned were Freda Bruggdorf, Marguerite Lexow, Betty Duff, John Gordon, Virginia Segar, Betty Townsend, Charles and Eleanor Schweizer, Marguerite Barker, Lillian Delpo, Nina Dietman, Dorothy Ruff, Gladys Page, Marge O'Neill, Georgia Engelke, Mary Evangelou, Dorothy and Waldo Frohardt, Eunice and Julienne Hatcher, and Tomea Kirchoff.

BAC offering customized business computer training

Due to increased demand for computer training throughout local business and industrial communities, the Business Assistance Center of Belleville Area College has opened a computer laboratory and will offer customized training at the Nichols Center in Belleville.

Contractual training programs may be offered for credit and non-credit at any requested skill level. Also, the college will offer credit and non-credit computer courses, open to the public, beginning in November at the Nichols site, 515 East D Street.

"Belleville Area College and the Business Assistance Center have been key players in addressing the needs of local industry," said Mary Walsh, director of the Business Assistance Center. "Our training representatives take these programs directly into the workplace, working with local industries to identify specific training objectives and to design unique programs to fill those needs."

During the last year, more than 120 employees at local law offices, manufacturers and governmental agencies have upgraded their WordPerfect computer skills through the Business Assistance Center's customized training programs. Training may be conducted at the trainees' workplace or at any of the college's campuses.

The Nichols computer laboratory, which opened Sept. 23, features 12 new industry-compatible computers, two laser jet printers and one dot matrix printer. Each computer will have access to every printer.

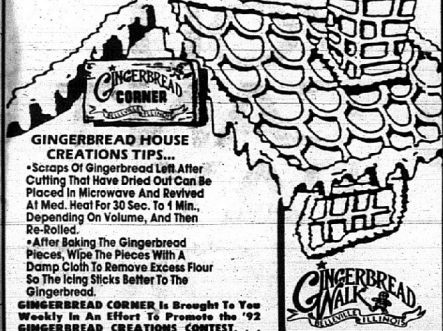

The available software includes WordPerfect 5.1, WordPerfect for Windows, Excel 4.0, Novell Netware 3.11, dBASE 4.0, Harvard Graphics, and PageMaker 4.0. Additional software packages will be acquired for specific contracts and training requests.

BAC worked jointly with the Belleville Parks and Recreation Department to open the Nichols Center in January as the community college's 22nd extension center location. The building formerly housed the Bursen Elementary School and had been used as a community center.

For information on contractual training through the Business Assistance Center, contact Susan Horton, business and industry training representative, at 235-2700, ext. 202, or toll-free 1-800-BAC-5131, ext. 202.

Precautions ensure Halloween is fun for all

Trick-or-treating as goblins and ghouls is fun, but getting hurt on Halloween can be frightful. The following precautions from St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Granite City are intended to help ensure that safety comes first.

- Make sure your child's costume is safe and flame resistant.
- Masks, hats and wigs can make it difficult to see when trick-or-treating. Make sure nothing restricts your child's vision. Makeup is better than a mask. Look for non-toxic kits.

- A costume that is light in color is easier for a motorist to see. Or you may want to use reflective tape on your child's costume for better visibility.

- High heels and oversize boots may cause a child to fall. Have your child wear shoes that are comfortable to walk in, such as tennis shoes.

- Beware of baggy costumes that can get caught on fences or cause your child to trip.

- Have your child carry a flashlight instead of a lighted candle or torch.

- Parents or a responsible teenager should accompany young trick-or-treaters.

- Use sidewalks. If there aren't any, walk on the left side of the road, facing cars.

- Families expecting trick-or-treaters should leave their porch lights on so children will know it's OK to visit.

- Never let children eat unwrapped candy. Always cut fresh fruit.

- Children should trick-or-treat in groups in their own neighborhoods and let their parents know their route.

•Housing

"There are some problems with public aid housing, because not all those people want to be together. You are singled out if you live, for example, in Kirkpatrick Homes," Williams said.

She suggested that distribution of public housing throughout all areas of the county would result in more home pride and less crime and dissent.

Most of those attending said home ownership was preferable to renting.

"You talk about self-esteem and pride... that would come overnight if people could own their own home," Michael Terrell said.

Terrell, a Venice alderman, said there is enough money for a lot of people to own their home.

If a family comes up with enough money for a down payment and can manage the monthly mortgage payment, he said, often nothing is left for maintenance and thus the home falls into disrepair.

"Now we can make the house payment, but we can't afford to fix that toilet or re-do the wiring or repair the gutter," Terrell said.

He said that Community Development rehabilitation grant money is difficult to come by.

For some reason, the money dried up before it got to Madison and Venice," Terrell said.

While most lending institutions establish a limit of 30 percent of total income to be committed to mortgage payments — an "affordability" guideline — the census showed that almost 38 percent of all renters in the county are 64 years old or older.

More than 30 percent of their income toward rent.

According to the census, the median annual household income in the county is $29,861. The median monthly housing cost for a home with a mortgage is $688, while the median monthly rent is $384.

"I don't want to own my home, but I can't because I'm on a fixed income," said Doretha Mosley of Madison.

Others at the meeting said that, while monthly payments could be made, coming up with a down payment and closing costs was the biggest obstacle preventing ownership.

They said better marketing and publicity on existing programs is needed to let people know the options available.

MCD is to hold three more hearings this week, and will then compile the information to develop a strategy to meet the needs expressed.

campaign, the service unit would be entitled to 50 percent of the money collected at kettles at six Collinsville locations — money that has in the past gone to the Salvation Army of Madison County.

Fuessel and Lt. Timothy Miller of the Salvation Army of Madison County both said the kettles bring in about $20,000 a year in Collinsville — about a third of the money brought in at all 16 locations in the county.

At Thursday's meeting, Fuessel said, George Grindle said that the Collinsville Service Unit would be allowed to run the kettles on Fridays and Saturdays during the campaign, but that the Granite City office would continue to run them on Monday through Thursday.

"On a piece of paper I wrote up my resignation there and then," Fuessel said. "I was given the permission to do the Free of Lights campaign, and I told the community that the money from that was staying here. Now they've taken that away, and my integrity is on the line."

George was on vacation this week and unavailable for comment. But Major David Grindle, divisional secretary at the divisional headquarters, said he was "baffled" by Fuessel's resignation.

"We'd encouraged them to do the bell ringing. In fact, we've been trying to get them to do it for the last three or four years," Grindle said.

"But it was our understanding that Friday and Saturday is what they were asking for... Fuessel is not aware, evidently, how difficult it is to get full coverage for the kettles."

Grindle said it would require 90 volunteer groups working at least one to 11-hour day to cover the kettles during the campaign on Friday and Saturday only.

Fuessel, however, disputed Grindle's statements.

"He said he was never consulted about the number of days the local service unit could have bell ringers, but that it was his understanding that the Collinsville Service Unit could ring bells as many days as it could get volunteers."

"I knew we couldn't fill it," he said. "I made an offer to work with Granite City, or to let them handle it as they have in the past, but give us a percentage. They never got back with me."

Fuessel and several board members of the Collinsville Service Unit also were upset at George's statement on Thursday that the Granite City office claimed it was serving about 100 Collinsville residents a month, and planned to bill the Collinsville Service Unit for those services.

Miller said his records showed that the office in Granite City had handled 85 cases this year involving 61 Collinsville families, or 287 individuals.

He said the Madison County office would also provide at least 30 Christmas baskets to Collinsville families.

He said the billing was something that was being considered, but said he had no plans to bill the Collinsville Service Unit if the Madison County office is allowed to continue to ring in Collinsville four days a week.

Fuessel and Grindle both said the Madison County office is allowed to continue to ring in Collinsville four days a week.

Until then, Fuessel said, the Collinsville Unit will have nobody to sign the checks for the 175 people a year helped by the service unit, and all will have to be referred to Granite City.

Future investments must be in children

By Jane Cosby
Correspondent

Whether you are a Democrat or Republican or neither of the above, I hope you will agree with me that there are some very important children's issues facing voters this election.

The Coalition for America's Children, an alliance of 200 national, state and community-based nonprofit organizations working for children, conducted a poll recently and found that 70 percent of American voters think the situation for children in the United States has gotten worse over the last five years.

In addition, three out of every five voters polled said it was very important to them that candidates running for public office have a children's platform.

Getting a majority of voters and politicians to agree on the same solutions to the problems facing today's children and families is next to impossible. Hopefully though, we will reach a consensus on which issues are important and require our immediate attention.

Access to health care has become a major concern for many Americans. Treatment for sickness or injury, basic primary well-baby care and immunizations should be available to every child in this country. To provide anything less is shortchanging our future.

The cost of medical care has reached the point where even basic check-ups and preventative care is beyond the reach of many middle-class families. The cost of a check-up and immunizations for a 5-year-old child entering school can approach $200. Unless this problem is addressed, many children in this country will go without basic health care.

It generally is accepted that the education of children from age 5 to 18 is the responsibility of government. But this job of educating children would be much easier if we didn't wait until the age of 5 to begin.

Early childhood education and parent education programs to prepare children for school are universally recognized as effective strategies to improve education.

Early intervention is one of the few strategies for improving the school performance of poor children that has been proved to be effective. If we do not start providing early childhood education for all children we will end up spending more money on remedial education later or losing some of our children to ignorance.

Quality education means education that works. Our future as a nation depends on educated citizens to run this country and work in the industries of the future. Improving education so all children have options and opportunities in the future is essential.

In business, investing for future returns is an accepted practice. Businesses that do not maintain their equipment, do not keep up with technology or ignore their future do not succeed.

It is time we started applying the principles of business to the job of preparing our next generation.

Two Warrior runners qualify, move on to Springfield meet

By Mike Kelly
Staff writer

Granite City salvaged a little joy from what's been a forgettable cross country season. Senior Bryan Reed and junior Sean Lewis, hampered by a sore hip for the better part of the year — earned sectional berths at the Class AA Edwardsville Regional Saturday at SUE, Reed, who medaled at the Southwestern Conference Meet on Oct. 16 (7th in 16:43), covered the three-mile course in 17:14. Lewis was 15th (17:18).

The top five teams and the top five individuals, who aren't members of qualifying teams, advanced to next week's Springfield Langhior Sectional at Lincoln Park.

"Those guys have been running real well," Granite City coach Dave McClain said. "They have a personal rivalry going. They're always chattering with each other during a race. They really push one another."

It's a fierce but friendly rivalry. "I don't want Sean finishing ahead of me and the same goes for him," Reed said. "If I see him letting up a little more energy to pass him, that certainly pushes us out there. That also keeps us up front with the leaders."

It was a moral victory for the Warriors, who won't send a team to the sectional for the first time since 1988. "We just couldn't find a fifth runner," Reed said. "We had four steady runners, but we never found anyone to fill that fifth spot. It was basically an individual effort. That's why getting to the sectional was so important to me."

"It was my last crack. I wanted to go there one more time..." Jason Blomster nearly joined his teammates bound for Springfield. He finished 24th (17:48) and missed the cut by 30 seconds.

"Jason ran a good race," McClain said. "He did a good job hanging in there, but he just missed out. Our goal was to get a couple of runners to the sectionals. Bryan and Sean were the guys we were counting on. Jason nearly made it three."

If they continue their pace, the next step is the state meet in Peoria on Nov. 7. "It's going to take a real effort to get there," Reed said. "I just want to have a strong showing." (See RUNNERS, Page 4B)

Injury slows down Dippel, not interest from recruiters

By Tony Panozzo
Staff writer

Brent Dippel's senior season obviously has not gone as originally planned. But there has been one exception — Dippel is still generating plenty of attention from college recruiters.

Despite his broken foot, Dippel has been followed and contacted by numerous schools — including Division I Connecticut, which he visited over the weekend. Along with a handful of other top recruits, he got to meet coach Joe Morrone and watch the Huskies defeat Villanova 3-0.

"It doesn't get much better than the Big East (conference)," Dippel said. "They play great competition. It's just like here, where they have a great tradition."

"He was real impressed with the campus," Granite City coach Gene Baker said. "We've had other players go there. Connecticut has been a stronghold in soccer for years. It's an honor for him, considering the distance and the type of injury he has."

Dippel broke his foot Sept. 10 against Collinsville and played his last game against Belleville West on Sept. 22. He has been out ever since.

Dippel is almost certain to play college soccer next year. He has been contacted by schools such as Wright State in Dayton, Ohio, and Southwest Missouri State.

"I've been lucky," Dippel said. "Even though I've been injured, I've had the fortune of scouts being here."

Dippel has started practicing with the Warriors lately, and he can run. His foot is slowly healing, which could permit him to return in time for the Edwardsville Sectional later this week.

But Dippel has a wonder whether he would be jeopardizing his future by playing again. He may return this week, he may not.

"I don't know yet," Dippel said Monday. "I'll work out every day and see how it feels. It's basically up to me. I'm hoping I can play, but if I mess it up again there's a possibility I'll need surgery. It wasn't a bad break, but it's something that doesn't heal easily. "I'm hoping I can play." So are his teammates. Dippel has been out most of the year, and the Warriors have missed his offensive punch.

When Dippel suffered the injury, he played through the pain for several games and unintentionally aggravated the condition.

"I'm pretty sure it started against Collinsville," Dippel said. (See DIPPel, Page 3B)

Granite City soccer legend succeeds as college coach
Fernandez keeps eye on area talent

Art Voellinger

He sat alone near the top of the bleachers at the Granite City High School boys soccer Tournament of Champions, and none of the St. Louis area spectators knew they were sitting next to a legend.

That's how I viewed David Fernandez recently as the former Granite City soccer whiz returned to his home area for his first visit as a coach/recruiter for Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky.

Illinois in prep soccer? I asked David.

"They have the quantity, but not necessarily all the quality," he replied.

MY HOW THE YEARS have passed since Fernandez led Granite City to an incredible four consecutive state championships from 1977-80 and then went on to an outstanding career at St. Louis University—where he was the first Illinois-born soccer player for the Billikens.

"This is one of the hotbeds of soccer in the country," Fernandez told me as we watched CBC play Rosary in a battle of two of the St. Louis powers.

"Is Missouri still way ahead of

No need to doubt. CBC, for instance, has an enrollment of 860 boys, of which 257 tried out for soccer this year.

Fernandez, though, is a prime example of the quality player who occasionally gains enough honors to convince any soccer observer that it is not his location as much as work ethic that determines his worth.

A THREE-TIME all stater and prep All-America, Fernandez even earned a place on the United States Junior Olympic team in 1979 and later played professionally in 1986 with Louisville in the American Indoor Soccer League.

By coincidence, it is Louisville which has welcomed Fernandez in regards to soccer. Among his achievements has been leading Ballard High to three state soccer titles in four years.

Two years ago, he taught and coached at Xavier High of Louisville before accepting the Bellarmine position, which is most challenging in that he is trying to build a program.

Recruiting will be Fernandez's answer, and despite a 1-7 start this season, he is hopeful of adding players from the St. Louis area as well as from places like Louisville and Cincinnati.

"Those are good soccer areas," Fernandez said of the latter.

As coach of the Louisville club team that finished second in the nation last summer for boys under 19, the 29-year-old Fernandez has gotten a first-hand look Former Granite City great David Fernandez returned to the area recently to scout players at the Tournament of Champions. Fernandez is now the head coach at Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky.

Getting to state might be out of the question for me, because that's a fast sectional field. But I'll give it my best shot."

Lewis, however, feels he can make the cut. "It's possible," he said. "I missed eight races with my hip, but I'm running well on it. It still bothers me, but it's not affecting my running. If we push ourselves, we've got a chance. Having a strong showing up there will motivate me for track in the spring."

"That's where I could go to state in the mile and two-mile events. But getting there in cross-country would be nice."

East St. Louis Lincoln dominated the meet. The Tigerettes won the girls race with 26 points; the Tigers won the boys race with 40. The Warriors were sixth with 167 points. Lori Burns of the Lady Warriors finished 6th (17:55).

O'Fallon's Lindsay Reed won the girls race (13:37) and Wood at young soccer talent.

HE WILL GET a closer look now that he has been named to oversee Kentucky's Olympic Development Team for players ages 13½-17½.

A communications major at St. Louis U., Fernandez is putting to use scholastic talents that also made him a credit to the Bills.

"I worked a lot on my own," said Fernandez, whose freshman year at Granite City South was marked by a state title and a 26-1-1 mark that remains a state record.

First club title planned for Legacy

A four-man scramble to decide a club champion at the Legacy Golf Course will be held for the first time Nov. 8. A cost of $160 per team covers greens fees, a cart, food, drink and prize money.

Prizes will be awarded to the first, second and third place teams. Prizes will also be awarded for closest shots to the pin on holes No. 6 and 17.

Entry forms can be obtained at the Legacy, and they will be taken no later than Nov. 4. For more information, call the course at 931-4653.

The second annual Parent/Child Tournament was held Oct. 17 at the Legacy. Bob and Chris Vollmer won the senior division, while Garry and Ginger Henson took second place. Pat and Patrick Schuman won the junior division, and Paul and Justin Cass took second.

The longest drive award went to Don Hadik. Jim Engelle was awarded for closest to the pin.

'Designer' eggs come to stores ready to put sunny sides up

Barnyard chickens must be clucking over their production line. Eggs are being branded for low saturated fat and spun around until their cholesterol count drops.

Year after year the number of eggs consumed has dropped very gradually. Back when the country was based on farms in 1945, per capita consumption of eggs was 402 a year. In 1991, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, that number was just 232.8, following a recent pattern of gradually dropping about two eggs a year.

In spite of eggs' traditional role as a standard for measuring protein in other foods, in recent years appreciation for them was marred because of their fat and, particularly, their cholesterol content. The national health community feels high dietary cholesterol can lead to heart disease.

Back in 1990 eggs got a reprieve when modern methods for calculating cholesterol were discovered. The number previously listed — 274 milligrams — was closer to an average of 211. This fits into a recommended average of 300 milligrams cholesterol per day on a heart-healthy eating regimen. Cholesterol and 5 to 6 grams fat — about one-fourth of it saturated fat — is located only in the yolk.

The American Heart Association gave egg-lovers something to cackle over when it loosened its recommendations for eating eggs from two to four per week.

Dietitian Cindy Berner, member of the nutrition committee of the St. Louis Chapter of the AHA, "This reflected the more sophisticated measurements, as well as the emphasis away from eggs as not a large problem area in the overall picture. Saturated fat in many foods is the focus of attention in elevating blood cholesterol."

Ideas for snack corn pop into the kitchen

Popcorn enjoys a heyday during the autumn season. A variety of snack ideas for using popcorn is available from Jolly Time. To receive a copy, send a proof-of-purchase from a Jolly Time Pop Corn product or 50 cents to: American Pop Corn Co., Box 178, Department N92, Sioux City, Iowa 51102. The company also offers a popcorn ball maker that helps mold popcorn animals, holiday ornaments and centerpieces and other edible creations. To order one for $1, send a check or money order ($1.75 for two) to the same address.

Cup of Coffee

The world's chickens thought they became guinea pigs, so to speak, in an effort to invent a better egg.

Yolk-free egg products, better known as egg substitutes, are one of the best-known results. Ann Smith, manager of product communications for Nabisco, explains that Fleischmann's Egg Beaters was the first such product on the market. Other brands with various attributes, both refrigerated and frozen, are now competing with it.

"Our unadorned variety offers diversity and usefulness. It can be used in baking and other foods, like mayonnaise," she says. "The only thing you can't do with it is make eggs sunny-side up."

She says it is a "99 percent real egg product" that has been pasteurized and quickly frozen to preserve freshness. Yolks are taken out of the mixture, coloring, vitamins and minerals have been added to bring it back to its original nutritive value and color after processing.

St. Louis is the sole producer of Egg Beaters in the country. The plant has been expanded over the last three years to accommodate an increasing demand for the product.

Now enters a parade of new products. Simply Eggs is among the first in the refrigerator section of the supermarket. A cornstarch substance is added to the egg yolk, then it is spun in a centrifuge to filter cholesterol down to 45 milligrams, only 20 percent of the amount found in an egg original. The fat content stays the same because the reduced-cholesterol product mixes the yolk back with the white.

The eggs are pasteurized, so — like the yolk-free products — they can be used without fear of bacterial contamination with little or no cooking. They are sold in cartons and can be used like regular eggs, except for uses that call for separated eggs or for sunny-side up eggs.

Roberta Duff, a local dietitian who is promoting the product nationally for Michael Foods Inc., says, "Taste tests have found that Simply Eggs are more like the real thing. In cooking, they tend to be at least as creamy and hold perhaps a little more volume. It is another healthier choice for the consumer. They keep unopened in the refrigerator for nine weeks."

A toll-free line for consumers with questions about the product, (800) 245-5073, is available from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Free tips for baking and cooking with it can be requested by writing to: Simply Eggs, P.O. Box 2737, Minneapolis, Minn. 55407. The double carton provides the equivalent of eight eggs for about $1.99.

Not far behind are eggs that look and act just like the regular ones on the shelf today — except they are being branded. They should be in St. Louis supermarkets by mid-November.

Joan Brown, director of consumer and customer services of National Super Markets, says the interest in controlling cholesterol is high among customers. National has offered a "monitored-cholesterol" egg. This ensured that the amount of cholesterol was as low as it should be, but made no promise that it would be lower. Enough customers were willing to pay a little extra for the assurance that the eggs were on the shelf about three years.

National has stopped selling this type of egg in favor of a new one called Egglands Best.

the one promised for November.

This shell egg is not lower in cholesterol or fat, but it has been shown that it does not increase cholesterol in those who eat it.

The secret to the success of its claims lies in what the chicken that produces it eats.

Dietitian Marjette Richardson, a former St. Louis resident, is manager of nutrition services for Egglands Best. She says the feed program, which awaits patent approval, is unique.

"Most producers use a low-cost feed program. Our hens are fed no meat or human food by-products. It is essentially a vegetarian diet. Canola oil is the only source of fat. Vitamin and mineral supplements are added," she says.

Because of the feeding program, which includes the seaweed kelp, there are two specific nutrients — iodine and vitamin E — which are extra in these eggs. An "EB" symbol is printed on each egg.

Clinical studies used to support Egglands' claims include two groups of people who were put on identical low-fat, cholesterol-reducing diets. One ate no eggs while the other ate up to 12 Egglands eggs a week. Both groups showed the same reduction in serum cholesterol.

These large-size eggs are expected to cost $1.79 to $1.89 a dozen.

Handy pantry efficient

For Two Or a Few

Family dinners clearly are not what they once were and more people are preparing food for only one or two people.

With such goals in mind, it is necessary to keep them convenient, efficient and delicious. A pantry must be stocked with ready-to-eat ingredients that offer easy alternatives for out-of-the-run meals and small tables. A small-portion cook can find many foods in cans available in single-serving sizes, which helps eliminate waste.

Some fresh foods make single servings easy. Potatoes are among them. They come in natural single-serving sizes. For a quick soup, open a single can, then add bits and pieces of leftovers from the refrigerator or freezer to make a tasty, satisfying and warming meal.

Canned chicken or tuna, with a low-fat mayonnaise or salad dressing dresses up favorite vegetables for a main-dish salad that is ready in a jiffy.

Three men receive Red Cross Lifesaver Award for saving children from fire

From left, Sgt. Calvin Hammond, Darrien Mickens and Clyde T. Jackson, all of Washington Park, Ill., receive the October American Red Cross Lifesaver of the Month award from Channel 4 News anchor Larry Conners.

ST. LOUIS, OCT. 13, 1992 - It took the combined effort of three Washington Park, Ill. men to rescue four children from a home engulfed by fire last April. For their heroic efforts, Clyde T. Jackson, Sgt. Calvin Hammond and Darrien Mickens, today received the American Red Cross, St. Louis Bi-State Chapter, Lifesaver of the Month award. The award was presented by Channel 4 news anchor Larry Conners at a special ceremony at KMOV.

LIFE SAVING AWARD

Jackson, an off-duty police officer, was at home when a neighbor, Mary Hopkins, ran inside his home with her clothes on fire. Her house was on fire, and her four children were still trapped inside. When Jackson ran outside, he saw another neighbor, Darrien Mickens, kick open the back door of the burning building. Jackson entered the house and began crawling to look for the children. He found a 9-year-old boy and pulled him to safety. Mickens also entered the building and carried a 7-year-old girl outside.

Realizing that there were still two children inside, Jackson re-entered and rescued the youngest 4-year-old girl. At that time, the two men were joined by another neighbor, Calvin Hammond, also an off-duty police officer. Together, Hammond and Mickens found the last child, a 6-year-old boy, and brought him to safety.

The lifesaving award is sponsored by Red Cross, Channel 4, Schnucks and the Suburban Journals. The St. Louis Bi-State Chapter of the American Red Cross initiated the program in 1982 to annually recognize unselfish heroes in the community. In April 1990, the program was expanded to honor an individual each month with the Lifesaver of the Month award. The program will culminate next year with the naming of the Lifesaver of the Year.

If you know someone who saved or sustained a life by using skills learned in a Red Cross health and safety course, Red Cross would like to hear from you. To request a nomination form, call Red Cross at (314) 658-2040, or pick one up at your neighborhood Schnucks courtesy desk.

Tour displays Alaska's wonders

Alaska occupies a special place in the national imagination. Its life and times are as exotic and electric as the northern lights. Alaska boasts more superlative statistics than any other state. The state is so big that just four Alaskas could be jammed into the area of the Lower 48.

Alaska's 45,000-mile coastline is longer than the rest of the country's combined.

Journal readers will be introduced to all the wonders that are Alaska on the 1993 Grand Alaska Tour.

The tour's itinerary combines extensive touring of Alaska's interior by air, coach and flight-seeing with the best-portion of an Inside Passage cruise aboard the Holland America Line.

Continuing the policy of including only "the best available" for Grand Tour participants, the Alaska Tour departs at the best time of the year — July 24.

As there is a limit to the number of the "best available" accommodations and services, the Journal tour is limited to a small number of travelers.

For information, reservations and a complete itinerary on the Grand Alaska Tour, contact Tenholder Travel at 894-5555 or 800-333-5010.

Information on the Journal-sponsored Grand Tours to Hawaii in February and the Alpine countries is also available. Early reservations are encouraged.

Pesci credits De Niro, luck with success

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Joe Pesci believes that a little luck—and a lot of preparation—have helped him build a formidable career as one of Hollywood's most versatile and compelling actors.

In 1976, at the age of 32, Pesci appeared in his first motion picture. It was a low-budget film called "Death Collector" that fared poorly at the box office, but managed to garner Pesci some nice reviews.

Armed with his newfound, albeit minor fame, Pesci went immediately to Hollywood to further his film career. Two years passed. Nothing happened.

Disillusioned, Pesci moved to Las Vegas where he took a job as a laborer and gave up on his hopes of making it as an actor. After returning to his home in the Bronx because of his father's illness and subsequent death, Pesci took a job as a restaurant manager in New York City. It was at the eatery that Pesci was noticed by Robert De Niro, who later called Pesci on the phone and asked him if he would like to play opposite him in "Raging Bull."

"I thought someone was busting me," Pesci laughed. "Some of the restaurant employees knew I had acted before. So when De Niro called, he said, 'This is really Robert De Niro.' I answered by saying I was really Joe Pesci."

Pesci's newest film is called "The Public Eye." He plays a news photographer in 1942 who is known for his ability to always be first on the scene with some of the most sensational news photos, especially on stories relating to organized crime.

"My character is an artist who Berny's (Joe Pesci) growing feelings for Kay Levitz (Barbara Hershey) lead him to the discovery of a wartime government scandal that has profound consequences on his art and life, in "The Public Eye."

is compelled to see his vision through, regardless of material gain," Pesci said. "He takes pictures because this is what he sees. He lives from midnight to dawn, and for him that's when real life exists. He becomes emotionally involved in his subjects. When they're in pain, he's in pain. When they laugh, he laughs. When they cry, he cries. He expresses his entire emotional life through his work."

Yes, he's awkward and lonely. But isn't everyone at some point in their lives? But for him, that's his whole life.

Pesci was an inevitable pick for "The Public Eye," said Howard Franklin, the film's writer and director. "Joe was not only physically right, with the kind of New York street vitality that the part needed, but he has the extraordinary ability to act without guile, with a feeling of artlessness," Franklin said. "When Joe acts, you're not conscious of any calculations or heavy technique. That's what makes him a true artist."

Pesci will reprise his comic role as one of the "wet bandits" in "Home Alone 2: Lost in New York," due for release Nov. 20. His more recent successes have been the comedy "My Cousin Vinny" and his Academy Award-winning work in "Goodfellas."

KMOX loses share of younger listeners

By Ian MacBryde
Correspondent

It isn't exactly the end of civilization, but finding that KMOX-AM (1120) has fallen from first place in one of the significant ratings areas is still a shock.

Rock station KSHE-FM (95) was ranked first among listeners aged 25 to 54, according to the Arbitron audience measurements for summer (July through September). KSHE barely leads KMOX in that category but nevertheless has replaced the "Voice of St. Louis" in that important age group.

KMOX still dominates the market with more than twice the share of the nearest competitor among all listeners, from 6 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week. But the CBS-owned giant slipped some 9.8 percent from its numbers during the same period last year.

Just to keep things in perspective, KMOX was up slightly from its performance in the summer of 1990.

KSHE, which moved into second overall from third in the spring, made a huge move among listeners in the younger end of that demographic, those aged 25 to 34.

KMOX, which lost a lot of men in that younger age bracket while picking up some women listeners, is telling advertisers that the audience in the 25 to 54 age bracket has more money to spend and is more likely to spend it. As you may have guessed, the station continues to dominate that segment of the audience.

Incidentally, if you are looking for a reason that KMOX took what, by its standards at least, is a big hit, you might look at the less-than-hoped-for performance of the Cardinals. KMOX lost the most audience between 7 p.m. and midnight, Monday through Friday—22 percent among listeners 25 to 54 compared with last summer. And the station, which had a comparatively poor July, came back with a strong September when the emphasis may have been more on a hot Presidential race than a pennant race.

Other notable notes from the ratings: KLOU-FM (103) and KRJY-FM (96)—both oldies stations—made the greatest percentage increases in the 25 to 54 audience among the Top 10 stations. KRJY doubled its audience in that demographic and moved to 10th place from 17th. CBS-owned KLOU went up 26 percent and moved to 5th from 7th.

WKDF-FM (106), which features what may be the snottiest talk in the market, went to 6th from 8th in total market. Its audience is dominated by its appeal to teens.

KYKY-FM (98) continued its slide to 7th overall and 6th in the 25 to 54 demo. The fall is most evident among ages during drive time: 6 to 10 a.m., where Mike Wall one teamed successfully with Guy Phillips. Wall left the adult contemporary station about a year ago.

Incidentally, KMOX continued to dominate drive time by a big margin over KSHE. That's the morning news/information program with Bob Hurdy, Bill Wilkerson and Wendy Wise followed by "The Morning Meeting" with Kevin Horrigan and Charles Brennan.

Discerning listeners may have picked up on the fact that many on-air people at KMOX, including Horrigan, are now acting as engineers on their own programs. Those same listeners may have heard a lot more technical errors than they used to hear on what once seemed to be a technically perfect station.

Horrigan, of course, is a newspaperman by training and cannot be expected to push the right buttons. The practice of using the talent in that fashion—undoubtedly a budget move—does raise the serious question of whether the audience is really getting all it deserves from talent that is distracted by flashing lights and unpushed buttons.

Williams blends eclectic sounds for 'Sweet World'

By Alan Sculley
Correspondent

When Lucinda Williams released her self-titled 1988 album on Rough Trade Records, it was hailed as one of the year's finest records. Rave reviews in magazines like Rolling Stone and Billboard praised her beguiling and gutsy blend of bluesy country, rock and folk.

In an interview, Williams said she realized she had set quite a standard, and was determined not to disappoint her fans when she began work on the project that would evolve into the recently released CD, "Sweet Old World."

"A lot of time you see that with (follow-up) albums from artists. They kind of go in a different direction, or you know, the usual thing. You get signed to a major label and it (a record) gets over-produced and that kind of thing," Williams said. "We were really aware of that when we went in and we wanted to keep things real, simple, and tried to keep the same magical feeling we had with the Rough Trade album that we felt like was so special." This simple goal turned out to be no small challenge, although at first things looked promising for Williams. The response to the Rough Trade album earned her a deal in 1989 with RCA Records. It looked like a perfect marriage.

The label president then was Bob Buziak, who was well known for registering acclaimed, but left-of-mainstream acts.

However, when Williams assembled her long-time musical cohorts — guitarist Gurf Morlix and Duane Jarvis, drummer Donald Lindley, John Gambotti and producer Dusty Wakeman — to record songs for the album, things didn't gel.

"It was a question of just the material," Williams said. "I just hadn't finished these songs, and I should have just said I'm not ready yet instead of going in and trying to find material, you know, and feeling kind of pressured about it. I should have just put my foot down and said I'm not ready yet. But I didn't do that, so that was a lesson I learned."

Williams then went back to work on her songs, but by the time she was ready to record again, Morlix and Wakeman were committed to other projects so she couldn't find her normal backing group.

She made a second attempt at an album using Cowboy Junkies producer Peter Moore, but Williams said she couldn't recreate the magic she had with her usual band.

Soon afterward, Williams' RCA relationship went completely downhill when Buziak left the label. An executive from RCA's Artist and Repertoire Department was assigned to oversee Williams' record. The two did not hit it off.

"He kind of had his own ideas and I had my own ideas. He wanted to hurry up and mix the record and put it out, and I was kind of holding back and saying no. My instincts were telling me something. 'Don't do this now,'" Williams said.

It took Williams most of 1991 to get released from her deal with RCA, at which point she signed with Chameleon Records, an independent label whose albums are distributed by Elektra. And who's the president of Chameleon? None other than Buziak.

Finally, all the ingredients were in place: the right songs, the right band and the right label.

And three years after the process began, Williams said she thinks she has created a worthy successor to the Rough Trade album in "Sweet Old World."

"I feel like we managed to achieve what we set out to achieve, which was pretty much to at least make it as good as the Rough Trade album if not better," she said.

Like the Rough Trade record (which was Williams' third release, following two early '80s records on the Folkways label), "Sweet Old World" has plenty of true-life lyrics. Williams said it's a bittersweet rocker about a teenager whose lonely upbringing sends him to the wrong side of the tracks. It was inspired by an article she read describing the life of a murderer folk the death sentence.

"Pineola," a stark folk tune, chronicles Williams' reaction to Lucinda Williams will perform at 8:30 p.m. Nov. 2 at Mississippi Nights.

a friend's suicide. "Little Angel, Little Brother" finds Williams movingly sharing her regrets and concern over her brother's drinking problems.

"He's very much alive now and doing fine. A few people have thought that he died in the song," Williams said of her brother.

As for her wide-ranging blend of music styles, Williams, 39, said the diversity came naturally. A Louisiana native and daughter of a university professor and poet, Miller Williams, she absorbed virtually every style of music as a youngster — with the exception of classical and jazz. The eclectic tastes carried into her performing once she started doing club gigs in the early 1970s.

Lucinda Williams plays Nov. 2 at Mississippi Nights. Tickets for the 8:30 p.m. show are $8 in advance. $10 day of show.

Far-out concessions sidetrack 'Consenting Adults'

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Yuppie wife-swapping in the comfortable suburbs and a frame-up for murder are at the crux of "Consenting Adults," starring ex-St. Louisan Kevin Kline.

Kline plays Richard Parker, an advertising jingle writer living outside Atlanta. Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio is his near-perfect wife, Priscilla.

When a fun-loving couple moves in next door, Richard and Priscilla's life takes a turn for the exciting. The new couple, Eddy and Kay Otis, played by Kevin Spacey and Rebecca Miller, are cordial and like to live on the edge.

Eddy says he's in the investment business. He runs manages to make $30,000 for Richard in just a few weeks by faking a car accident and giving Richard proceeds of the injury settlement from the insurance company.

Next, fast Eddy convinces Richard to change houses in the middle of the night on the premise that both their wives will be so sleepy that neither will notice (or care) that they're making love to someone other than their own spouse.

"I don't know about you, but it doesn't sound much like my neighborhood."

Next thing we know, Kay is murdered and Richard is framed for the crime, which he didn't commit, of course.

Fast-Eddy has struck again. "Consenting Adults" is so far-fetched that it loses credibility quickly. Although the film's resolution is suspenseful and involved, it is in the service of a script so outlandish that the audience isn't likely to care.

Distinctive designs characterize Ford cars for 1993

Value, technical advancements and distinctive design characterize Ford Division cars for the 1993 model year.

"Today's consumer is looking for a car that makes a strong statement in design and level of technical sophistication, all for a reasonable price," says Ross H. Roberts, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager.

The all-new Ford Probe leads the 1993 product array. Its advanced "cab-forward" design contributes not only to its striking good looks but to its ride, handling and interior space.

In the 1993 Ford Taurus lineup, the high-performance Taurus SHO (Super High Output) offers an automatic transaxle for the first time.

For 1993, Ford Escort has a number of design refinements, plus an innovative "One-Price" plan for all four Escort LX body styles, which include many popular options.

Following is a summary of Ford Division's 1993-model new car lineup:

1993 Ford Probe

The sporty, all-new 1993 Ford Probe has been engineered to provide superior performance and handling to match its bold new appearance.

There are two series — Probe GT and Probe. Probe GT's new twin-cam 24-valve V-6 engine has a cast-aluminum block and cylinder heads, and generates 164 horsepower. A five-speed manual transaxle is standard on the GT. An electronically controlled four-speed automatic transaxle is optional.

1993 Ford Taurus
A major redesign in 1992 for America's popular family car is further enhanced with the 1993 Ford Taurus.

An automatic transaxle may be ordered on the Taurus SHO for the first time. It is coupled with a 3.2-liter version of the SHO double overhead camshaft (DOHC) 24-valve V-6 engine. The standard SHO powerplant remains the 3.0-liter DOHC engine, linked to a 5-speed manual transmission. Updated design features include a functional decklid spoiler with integrated light-emitting diode (LED) stop lamp.

1993 Ford Escort
Key design refinements for the new Ford Escort include six new exterior colors, new grille, wheel covers, taillamp treatments, and color-keyed body-side molding and bumpers for most models.

Along with these fresh styling features, Ford is offering an innovative "One-Price" marketing plan for Escort LX. It applies to all four Escort LX models—three-, four-, five-door, and wagon — with a special option package.

1993 Ford Thunderbird
The new Ford Crown Victoria retains the styling and outstanding ride and handling that have made it the best-selling car in its market segment (middle specialty) for the past three years. There are two series for 1993: LX and Super Coupe.

New features for the LX include color-keyed exterior mirrors and steering wheel, leather shift knob and optional 19-inch cast aluminum directional wheels.

1993 Ford Mustang
Ford Mustang offers exceptional performance and classic styling. It is offered in both the LX and GT series and three body styles — coupe, hatchback and convertible.

Improvements for 1993 include a radio with improved display and increased wattage, and a new headliner for the convertible.

Mustang LX has a 2.3-liter electronic fuel injection (EFI) I-4 engine as standard, and a 5.0-liter SEFI High Output V-8 engine is available.

1993 Ford Crown Victoria
The new Ford Crown Victoria features an improved electronically controlled automatic (AODE) transmission and new styling features that enhance last year's major redesign. The AODE transmission features an overdrive lock-out function for better acceleration on demand.

1993 Ford Tempo
The stylish and functional five-passenger Ford Tempo is available in two series for 1993. Two- and four-door sedans are offered in the LX series, and a four-door sedan in the LX series.

A 2.3-liter four-cylinder SEFI

The 1993 Ford Taurus SHO.

The 1993 Ford Probe.

engine comes standard on both series, and a 130-horsepower V-8 SEFI engine is optional.

1993 Ford Festiva

Ford's Festiva, which provides value and utility in a fun-to-drive package, is available in two series—L and GL. The 1993 Festiva has a 1.3-liter EFI I-4 engine.

Chrysler Corporation unveils 1993 Jeep Wrangler

Chrysler Corporation recently unveiled the 1993 Jeep Wrangler at ceremonies marking the start of production of the two-door sport utility vehicle at the company's Toledo, Ohio assembly plant.

Wrangler's move to Toledo means approximately 850 additional hourly jobs in Toledo. The positions have been filled by Toledo assembly workers who had been laid off.

"Chrysler has invested nearly $40 million to prepare both plant and work force for Wrangler production," said Bernard I. Robertson, Chrysler Vice President-Jeep/Truck Engineering and General Manager-Jeep/Truck Operations. "The extensive training given to Toledo's great work force and the facility improvements ensure the quality of each and every Wrangler produced here."

"The partnership between Chrysler and Ohio government officials is a strong one," said Ohio Gov. George Voinovich. "Working together has yielded positive results for the company and the state, and has been especially beneficial in maintaining jobs for the talented and dedicated Toledo workers who are proudly building world-class vehicles."

The Wrangler is produced at two separate sections of the Toledo Assembly complex. The vehicle's body is assembled and painted at the Parkway portion of the plant then transported to Stickney Avenue section for final assembly where the chassis engine and trim components are added.

Strong support from the plant's two union locals and state and local governments was crucial to Chrysler's decision to move Wrangler to Toledo. The state of Ohio pledged $1 million in training funds in support for the Wrangler project. Toledo's support includes tax abatement and infrastructure improvements.

Jeep Wrangler sales for the first six months of 1992 were 28,933, up 24 percent from the 23,390 sold in the period a year ago. In late April, production of Jeep Wranglers ended at the company's Brampton, Ontario assembly plant. The work force there is being folded into the plant that recently began production of Chrysler's all new mid-size sedans — the 1993 Chrysler Concord, Dodge Intrepid and Eagle.

Grand Am, Bonneville Pontiac leaders

The 1993 Pontiac Grand AM GT Coupe features standard automatic lock doors, but with the same sticker price as the 1992 models.

Pontiac Division in 1993 builds on the successful launch of its Grand Am and Bonneville models with expanded customer care initiatives, a host of product improvements and greater value on its Sunbird and Grand Prix models.

Mid-size Grand Prix base models carry Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price stickers no higher than 1992, but with standard automatic power door locks added on all models.

Pontiac Sunbird prices have been dropped $228 on the LE Coupe and $338 on the LE Sedan and are no higher than 1992 prices for the remainder of the line up.

Just when everyone else is raising prices, Pontiac is taking an aggressive stance by offering customers even greater value on two models that account for about one-third of our total sales," says Pontiac General Manager John G. Middlebrook.

With an MSRP of $9,382, the Sunbird LE models have a $91 price advantage over prime competitor Escort LX when equipped with an automatic transmission. In addition, Sunbird has standard across-the-line anti-lock brakes while Escort doesn't even offer the accident avoidance safety feature.

Pontiac's nine percent increase in total vehicle sales through July was more than double the percent increase posted by the total U.S. new vehicle market.

In passenger cars, the gap is even more impressive with Pontiac sales through July up more than seven percent compared with a flat 0.6 percent increase for the entire industry.

The spectacular launch of new-for-'93 Bonneville and Grand Am is illustrated in their remarkable sales success.

May was the best single month ever for Grand Am (35,369 deliveries) since the introduction of Pontiac's Number One-selling model in August 1985.

Here's a quick look at the 1993 model Pontiac lineup:

The fourth-generation of legendary Pontiac sport car excitement — the 1993 Firebird — debuts during the 1993 model year. The Pontiac Firebird is newly styled and engineered to deliver high performance and roadability.

Product improvements such as noise and vibration reductions, along with new trim and colors will keep sales momentum going on the 1993 Grand Am.

Bonneville enhancements include the addition of a Sport Luxury Edition (SLE) — available as a package on the Bonneville SE.

In the midsize segment, the lowest priced Grand Prix — the LE Sedan — becomes an even greater value with the available BYP Sport Appearance Package. High Sport Appearance and B4U Aero Performance Packages have been extremely successful for the "Excitement Division" since their introduction in 1991.

In the 1992 model year alone, 85 percent of all SE Coupe retail sales included one of the two popular Pontiac packages.

That great value carries over to the Sunbird line in 1993 with an available B4U Sport Appearance Package on the SE Coupe. The package provides a look similar to the GT coupe.

Olds customers keep asking for more

Oldsmobile has produced more than two million Cutlass Ciera and Cruiser family transporters during the past decade and satisfied customers keep asking for more. Solid transportation value with the high-quality that is expected of an Oldsmobile is what makes this line such a perennial success.

The Ciera/Cruiser formula is simple but shrewd: combine four doors, front-wheel drive, and a sensible selection of modern powertrains with mid-size room and comfort. Refine the product to a fare-thee-well with a full decade of continuous improvement. Attach an attractive price tag and stand back: discriminating customers will take care of the rest.

The Ciera/Cruiser family consists of two bodystyles—a four-door sedan and wagon—with a 3300 V-6 engine and two different automatic transmissions. There are two trim levels (down from three last year), both of which are covered by Oldsmobile's Customer Protection plan.

There are many small and a few significant changes for 1993. Inside, Ciera/Cruiser customers can now select a driver's-side inflatable restraint system. The 2.5-liter Tech IV base four-cylinder engine has been replaced by the 3300 V-6 as the standard powerplant. The chassis has been recalibrated with more caster in the front suspension and variable-rate rear springs to improve ride and handling. The exterior is freshened with body-color body side moldings, a new grille finish, and the deletion of flaring bars from the front fenders and crest emblem from the C-pillars.

A 55/45 split-bench seat with power recliners is now standard equipment in the base version of Oldsmobile's popular Cutlass Ciera and Cruiser family. To match this pair of models to established customer preferences, air conditioning is also standard while certain low-volume features have been deleted, such as Rallye instrumentation, bucket seats, and a center console.

The big news for 1993 is the optional availability of a driver's side airbag. The voice of the customer called out loud and clear for this feature.

A long list of available options permits the box-checking customer to upgrade these S models to their heart's content.

Cutlass Ciera SL and Cutlass Cruiser SL

Sleeping up to the more luxurious SL versions of this family-oriented line buys Oldsmobile customers a powerful 3300 V-6 engine, a driver's-side air bag, a convenience group, a stereo radio with cassette player, and other equipment.

Geo Prizm debuts for '93

Chevrolet/Geo dealers this fall will bring to market the first of a second generation of Geo models—the all-new Geo Prizm.

Built at NUMMI, the GM-Toyota joint venture in Fremont, Calif., the Prizm has been the best-selling car in the Geo lineup since the Geo brand was established in 1988.

For 1993, the new Prizm offers head-turning contemporary styling, several dramatic under-the-skin improvements, styling cues reminiscent of successful import luxury sedans, and a continued emphasis on quality.

The combination of a stylish, new shape and a longer wheelbase (two inches more than the 1992 model) makes the new PRIZM sleeker and smoother.

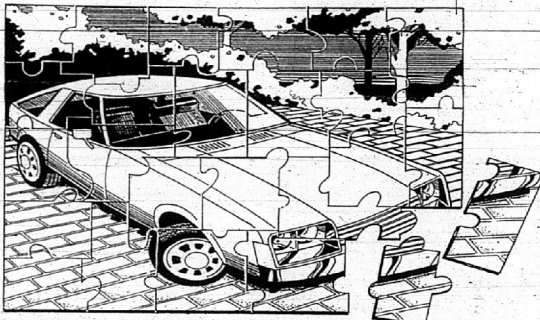

The Prizm is available in standard and LSi trim levels. (The GSi model is discontinued.)

Other major improvements designed to isolate the Prizm's passenger compartment from engine, wind and road noise include use of new sound-deadening material, a sandwich-type dashboard construction, hydraulic torque-axis engine mounts and additional floor insulation.

The 1993 Prizm has more rear head, leg and shoulder room than its predecessor yet is only one inch wider.

Delco designed two high-function radios for the 1993 Prizm—an AM/FM stereo cassette with digital clock and an uplevel dual compact disc/cassette system. Features of the new system include a backlit LCD display, a pre-set graphic equalizer for pop, rock, classical and news broadcasts, a "PSCAN" button for scanning preset stations, a tuned speaker system and—for the CD-cassette system—an "RDM" button that plays CD tracks in random order.

LOOK AND SEE WHAT'S NEW FOR '93

Dodge Intrepid 'tuned' to near-perfect balance

The 1993 Dodge Intrepid was designed to be a comfortable and secure 5- or 6-passenger automobile. Still, even a brief road test might convince you that Intrepid has all the ingredients needed to make it a high-performance sports sedan. In fact, every facet of Intrepid's performance has been "tuned" to achieve a near-perfect balance between these two seemingly opposite roles. It's something the automotive engineering community and auto journalists call "active safety." Rather than performance based on a primal desire to go faster and farther than all the others, this definition of performance focuses on the very real need to avoid accidents in a wide variety of everyday driving situations. To that end, Intrepid is available with a choice of two V6 engines, a standard 12-valve, 3.3-liter and the optional 24-valve, 3.5-liter. Both engines feature sophisticated sequential multipoint fuel injection. Smooth, precise shifting is provided by an all-new automatic overdrive transaxle. To provide an excellent grip of the road, particularly in inclement weather, antilock braking and electronic low-speed traction control are available.

Volvo bringing back the excitement

Exciting is not a word people normally associate with Volvo, a car company best known for safety, durability and longevity. But, the new Volvo 850 GLT, a front-wheel-drive, mid-size sedan designed with the driving enthusiast in mind, will likely change all that. Joseph L. Nicolato, President and CEO of Volvo Cars of North America Inc., stated that the newest member of the Volvo product line would have a significant impact on the image of Volvo in North America when it arrives this fall. "The lively performance and excellent handling of the 850 GLT will definitely bring new customers to Volvo showrooms," Nicolato explained. "The decidedly sporty character of the 850 GLT will appeal to a group of people who would never have considered a Volvo previously."

There are many clever design solutions in the 850 GLT, but three demand special attention — the drive-train, the rear suspension, and the safety systems. In each of these areas Volvo has pushed the envelope of automotive technology. In fact, the car has four patented design solutions. The unique drivetrain of the 850 GLT was developed to satisfy performance and safety objectives. To achieve the best interior or space utilization while reducing exterior dimensions, front-wheel drive was chosen. Mounting the alloy engine transversely produced a desirable 60/40 weight distribution, and allowed the engine to help distribute the energy from an offset frontal crash across the entire width of the firewall. To achieve the desired level of performance, a 2.4 liter 4-cylinder could easily be placed transversely in a front-wheel-drive car. But a 5-cylinder, 20-valve engine was considered by Volvo engineers to be superior in terms of output and smoothness. Volvo developed such an engine as a part of a modular light alloy engine family which included inline 4, 5 and 6-cylinder variants. The compact 5-cylinder powerplant produces 168 HP at 6200 rpm. With the help of a variable inlet manifold, the engine has 90 percent of its maximum torque available from 2,000 to 6,000 rpm. The transverse mounting of the engine posed other engineering challenges. The combination of the in-line 5-cylinder engine and Volvo's demand for a short turning circle left little room for a transmission.

For 1993, Buick features a new appearance for Regal sedan, enhanced 3,800 V-6 engines in Park Avenue, LeSabre and Regal, a driver air bag and new standard engine in Century and other improvements throughout the line. "In the last several years, Buick has launched more new models than ever before in our nearly 90 years of business," said Buick General Manager Edward H. Mertz. "This year is one of refinement, with a fresh look for Regal sedan, more use of such safety equipment as anti-lock brakes and air bags, and powertrains in many models." The mid-size Regal now includes, as standard equipment, the Hydra-matic 4T60-E electronically controlled automatic transmission — the same one that has received highly favorable reviews for smoothness and responsiveness on Buick's luxury models. Regal sedan has a more sculptured front appearance with the hood integrated with the new grille and headlamps. The tail lamps and bumpers also have subtle changes to provide more of a family resemblance to the larger LeSabre and Park Avenue. The widely acclaimed 3.8-liter 3000 V-6 with tuned port injection has been modified for quieter, more responsive performance in some models. The enhanced 3800, which also meets stricter emission standards in California, is now standard in Park Avenue, LeSabre and Regal Gran Sport and optional in other Regals. Torque is increased by 51-ft to 225 at 3200 rpm while horsepower remains 170 at 4000 rpm. All Buicks with naturally aspirated 3800 V-6s have a one-mile-per-gallon improvement in the projected city EPA fuel economy ratings. For Park Avenue and Riviera, the estimated ratings are 19 mpg city and 27 highway; for LeSabre and Regal, 19 city and 26 highway. A supercharged 3800 V-6 is again standard in the flagship park Avenue Ultra. This powerful and responsive engine delivers 205 hp at 4400 rpm and 260 lb-ft of torque at 2600 rpm and projected fuel economy of 17 mpg city and 26 highway. The mid-size Century features a new standard 2.2-liter four-cylinder engine with multi-port fuel injection that delivers 110 horsepower at 5200 rpm and 130 lb-ft of torque at 3200 rpm and estimated fuel economy of 22 city and 31 highway. The 3200 V-6, on which Buick's IndyCar engines are based, remains optional in Century and Riviera. Twelve Buick engines, including the record-setting pole winner, qualified for the 1992 Indianapolis 500 and Al Unser, Sr. finished third, best finish yet for a Buick engine in the 500.

Roadmaster sedans and Roadmaster Estate Wagon, designed for those who want a full-size, full-frame vehicle with rear-wheel drive and V-8 power, continue to offer the 5.7-liter V-8 with electronic fuel injection, generating 180 hp at 4000 rpm and 300 lb-ft of torque at 2400 rpm, and project EPA ratings of 16 city and 25 highway. All other Buicks have front-wheel drive. Buick continues to achieve recognition to support its message, the new symbol for quality in America. For example, Park Avenue was ranked in 1992 at "best overall American car value" by IntelliChoice Inc., an independent California-based market research firm. Highlights of the 1993 lineup: PARK AVENUE AND PARK AVENUE ULTRA. In addition to the enhanced 3800 V-6, Park Avenue offers refinements of its award-winning graceful and aerodynamic styling. Park Avenue and Ultra have new and different grilles, both modified versions of the vertical-bar design that has long been associated with luxury Buicks. Among new features are an optional automatic ride control system, optional new 15-inch wire wheel covers on Park Avenue and detail changes such as four-spoke steering wheel (in mid-model year) and redesigned lighted vanity visor mirror.

ROADMASTER SEDANS AND ESTATE WAGON. Roadmaster sedans and Roadmaster Estate Wagon have a number of technical enhancements for 1993. And they have the greatest towing capacity of any Buick — 5,000 pounds with optional towing package. Roadmasters have standard driver air bag, anti-lock brakes and analog-gauge instrument panel. Among new features for 1993 are Solar-Ray windshield added on Estate Wagon (added mid-year 1992) for protection against harmful sun rays, a locking system for power windows so operation of the windows may be controlled by the driver, and an improved acoustical package.

RIVIERA. Riviera, which has a 30-year heritage as Buick's prestige personal luxury coupe, offers an unusually high level of standard comfort, convenience and safety features. LESABRE. LeSabre, Buick's best-selling model that was completely redesigned in 1992, features refinements in addition to the enhanced 3800 V-6 with TPI. Anti-lock brakes, which were standard on Limited in 1992 are now standard on Custom as well. REGAL. Regal sedan has freshened styling and all Regals have an enhanced powertrain, new seat fabrics and new front seats that are described as much more comfortable. Regal's standard on Gran Sport) are now mated to an electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive. Projected EPA ratings for the 3.1 V-6 are 19 mpg city and 29 highway and for the 3800 19 and 28. CENTURY. A Special model has been added to Century Wagon. The Special is now offered in Century sedan and wagon and represents the best value for price within the Century lineup. Century is also offered in Custom coupe, sedan and wagon and Limited sedan. For the last two years, Century has been recognized for its inherent safe design by "Prevention" magazine. In 1992 "Prevention" selected the Century Wagon at its top-rated station wagon, following a similar award in 1991 for Century sedan. SKYLARK. Skylark coupe and sedan, dramatically redesigned for 1992, return with new trim levels and more features and enhancements. Skylark is offered in new Custom and Limited trim levels in addition to Gran Sport. Split bench (55/45) seats are now standard, and cloth bucket seats are available.

GMC keeps on trucking

The full-size van continues to drive a key role in the American automotive marketplace as people movers and cargo haulers, helping meet the nation's appetite of 400,000 full-size vans per year. And two significantly improved vehicles from GMC Truck: Rally and Vandura. In general terms, the Rally can be categorized as GMC Truck's passenger van, complete with windows and a fully appointed interior. Rally meets the needs of buyers who want space and luxury afforded by a full-size van. These buyers often utilize the vehicle's substantial towing capabilities.

Vandura most often serves commercial and custom conversion applications. Vandura is produced without windows as a cargo van and can be ordered in cutaway form. GMC Truck is a major player in the conversion market and the Division has negotiated official agreements with the country's top conversion manufacturers like Explorer, StarCraft and Tiera Motor Coach. These business partnerships ensure conversions of the highest quality and help protect customers from less established operations that cannot fulfill the warranty obligations GMC Truck mandates.

Rally and Vandura offers buyers more value, choice and flexibility than any other full-size van, but their advantages don't stop there. The changes and specifications listed here apply to both vehicles and clearly prove the importance of the full-size van market to GMC Truck.

New for 1993. Improvements for the new model year are comprehensive and give customers significant reasons to keep Rally and Vandura at the top of the automotive shopping lists. Major safety and mechanical improvements include:

*A four-wheel anti-lock braking system (ABS) replaces 1992's rear-wheel anti-lock brake system on Vandura cargo vans. The new system provides added steering control under braking, because the front wheels resist locking under braking, steering control is vastly improved compared to that available with the front wheels are skidding. This is a significant safety addition and it is now standard on all models for 1993.

*A new electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission the Hydra-matic 4L60-E is standard on all models with a Gross Vehicle Weight Rating (GVWR) under 5,000 pounds. Benefits of this electronically controlled transmission include more reliable operation, smoother shifts, improved fuel efficiency and second-gear part-throttle starting or better slippery-road acceleration performance. The 4L60-E is mated with four engines, the 3.1-liter V-6, 3.9-liter V-6, 5.7-liter V-8 and the 6.2-liter V-8 diesel.

*Models equipped with the 7.4-liter V-8 engine benefit from a much larger radiator to improve cooling and reduce the likelihood of premature engine wear.

*The 5.0-liter V-8 engine has new piston rings which forced compression for better cylinder-wall conformity and less oil consumption.

*The 4.3-liter V-6 engine has a new, more reliable thermostat, a revised camshaft profile for better idle stability, and new intake manifold and cylinder head passages for better breathing.

*All engines benefit from a new "quiet drive" fan clutch, a device that quiets engine noise, especially during cold starts.

*To reduce the likelihood of vehicle theft, a new steering column sleeve helps protect the ignition lock cylinder.

*A brake/transmission shift interlock is standard on all models. This integrated safety system helps avert unintended acceleration by preventing the transmission from being shifted out of "Park" without application of the brakes.

*Scotchguard-protected material is now used on all models with cloth upholstery; dirt and stain resistance are markedly improved.

*A new type of window glass is standard. Called "Solar Ray," it reflects undesirable light wavelengths to keep the interior cooler on bright summer days while reducing the deteriorating effects of ultraviolet light on interior fabrics and plastics. This feature is especially helpful on Rally, due to its large window glass area.

Comfort, safety features highlight '93 Brougham

Webster's defines a "limousine" as a large, luxurious, chauffeur-driven sedan. Add the word "Cadillac" and the definition comes to life.

An important element considered in the design, technology, and safety features of the 1993 Cadillac Brougham was that a portion of its production would be allotted to outside specialists to convert the vehicles into limousines.

In order to ensure that its limousine trade meets Cadillac standards of manufacturing, quality control and customer satisfaction, Cadillac Motor Car Division recently initiated the Cadillac Master Coachbuilder Program.

Similar to the assessment Cadillac underwent as it applied for and ultimately won the 1990 Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award, potential Master Coachbuilders complete an assessment summary and prepare for site visits of their facilities.

The criteria is demanding. Cadillac looks for specific design and manufacturing processes; for quality control assurances; for customer satisfaction procedures and for a strong, visible management commitment to quality.

In return, Master Coachbuilders—who must renew on an annual basis—receive a number of exclusive technical, business and marketing support services. Such benefits include a toll-free hotline service to access engineering support; technical drawings and information; a technical consortium group of Cadillac Master Coachbuilder members and Cadillac staff who work to accommodate National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and other federal and state-mandated requirements; and access to GM/Cadillac training programs.

Cadillac Master Coachbuilders and their vehicles also are acknowledged and promoted in Cadillac marketing plans and advertising. They are invited to participate in Cadillac dealer model previews and selected auto shows.

The Cadillac received by conversion specialists have a 7,200 pound gross vehicle weight package that simplifies conversion for specific uses and includes all necessary options and standard equipment for comfort and authoritative performance. For limousine conversions, this includes larger ball joints and control arm bushings, heavier steering arm, thicker brake rotor, higher-capacity springs, heavy-duty wheels, larger rear axle and universal joints, and higher load tires.

The 1993 Cadillac Brougham d'Elegance

Nick nicks in bud with planning

It's almost impossible to keep your car looking perfect — with no scratches, dents or nicks, especially if you must park on the street.

But a little planning and preparation can help avoid many problems before they occur.

When you park in a shopping mall lot, try to park as far away as possible from other cars to keep their doors from banging into your vehicle. After all, a little extra walking is good for your heart. Try to avoid parking diagonally across two spaces; it looks tacky and doesn't impress anyone.

Even if you are only able to protect one side of your car from attack by parking next to a divider or tree, do it. That's at least one side that won't be harmful. If possible, park your car in a garage or under a carport to protect it from dirt, tree sap, bird droppings and urban pollution.

On the road, try to keep your distance behind big trucks, especially dump trucks, which may launch rocks or other missiles that strike your windshield or body.

Fixing small scratches and nicks is not a difficult job but requires a lot of skill and experience and is best left to professionals. Be forewarned that your repair probably won't be completely invisible.

If a scratch has not yet rusted, simply clean it with enamel thinner and let it dry. To get rid of rust, protect the area around the scratch with masking tape. Wrap some 3/8 steel wool around the eraser end of a pencil and rub the scratch lightly until the rust is gone.

Brush away all dust, then clean with enamel thinner and let dry. Then apply a rust-inhibiting lacquer-based primer to the bare metal. Do not get the primer on the surrounding paint. Let the primer dry thoroughly.

Buy a small bottle of touch-up paint from your dealer or auto parts store. Try to match the color as well as you can, keeping in mind that car paint fades over time. Brush a thin coat over the dried primer. Let it dry and buff with a polishing compound.

Two world-class products leading Lincoln-Mercury

Two all-new world-class products — the Lincoln Mark VIII and Mercury Villager — offer both driver- and passenger-side air bags as standard equipment.

In addition to the latest safety and technology features, we believe Lincoln-Mercury products offer customers outstanding value."

Mark VIII is a luxury car that will take on the luxury division's first minivan — the aerodynamic, front-wheel-drive Villager.

Later in the model year, the new Mark VIII will lead the Lincoln line into the future with aerodynamic styling, a dramatic and world-class ride and handling.

"Adding Villager to our lineup enables us to serve the needs of customers who want the flexibility of a minivan and the quality and comfort of a Mercury," says Lee R. Miskowski, Ford vice president and Lincoln-Mercury general manager. "Mark VIII is our flagship of the future — a car that will take on the luxury cars of the world."

Villager and Mark VIII are the sixth and seventh all-new vehicles out of a total of 10 Lincoln-Mercury products — introduced in the past three years.

Addition of a standard passenger-side air bag supplemental restraint system (SRS) to the driver-side air bag system in the 1993 Mercury Sable and Mercury Villager solidifies the division's position as a leader in safety features.

Seven Lincoln-Mercury carlines, including Mercury Topaz and Mercury Capri, now offer a driver-side air bag SRS. And five of those seven Lincoln Town Car, Lincoln Continental, Lincoln Mark VIII, Sable and Grand Marquis — offer both driver- and passenger-side air bags as standard equipment.

"In addition to the latest safety and technology features, we believe Lincoln-Mercury products offer customers outstanding value."

Following are other highlights for 1993, by carline:

1993 Lincoln Town Car
The new Town Car delivers a fresh look from bumper to bumper, from the new grille to standard geometric-spoke wheels to new taillamps and rear safety reflector bar. New standard features include a leather-wrapped steering wheel, electronic instrument cluster, remote-control keyless entry system and new electronic climate control.

1993 Lincoln Mark VIII
Mark VIII, to be introduced later in the model year, will be powered by a powerful 4.6-liter "Four Cam" 32-valve V-8 aluminum engine. Its world-class ride and handling will be provided by an electronic, wide-ratio four-speed automatic overdrive transmission and computer-controlled air-spring suspension system with speed-dependent height adjustment.

1993 Mercury Grand Marquis
A right-front passenger-side air bag SRS is standard on the 1993 Mercury Grand Marquis.

Also standard are a new clock, cupholders, color-coordinate body-side moldings and bumper strips, and an AM/FM cassette radio.

1993 Mercury Cougar XR7
The Mercury Cougar carline is consolidated into a single series — the XR7 — for 1993. The new model has a sport instrument cluster, leather-wrapped shift knob, color-keyed steering wheel and column, new wheel covers and color-keyed roof moldings.

1993 Mercury Sable
Mercury Sable adds standard equipment a right-front passenger-side air bag SRS, integrated console and floor shift, and new seat fabrics.

1993 Mercury Topaz
Mercury Topaz is consolidated into a single series for 1993, the GS. Topaz offers an optional driver-side air bag SRS.

Protect engine with cooling system

Did you know that the combustion temperature inside your hood can reach 4,500 degrees?

That's hotter than Georgia asphalt. Without the cooling system in good working order your oil would evaporate in seconds and your engine would melt.

The cooling system also stabilizes the engine's operating temperature and provides heat for passengers.

Most cars use a liquid cooling system with antifreeze, usually a 50-50 mixture of water and ethylene glycol.

Antifreeze lowers the coolant's freezing temperature and raises the boiling point so it's vital to have the proper proportions in your radiator all-year round.

Here's how the typical systems work:

Your water pump draws the coolant through a hose from the bottom of the radiator through passages in the engine block where it picks up heat. The heated coolant leaves the engine through an upper hose and enters the top of your radiator.

In the radiator the coolant loses its heat as the liquid flows through the rows of tubes connected to metal cooling fins. The fins are clearly visible in the front of the radiator.

There's a fan attached to the water pump pulley that helps dissipate the coolant's heat by pulling the air through the radiator fins. Some of the hot coolant is routed through the heater supply hose to the heater core, where a fan can blow hot air into the passenger compartment.

The thermostat is a valve housed where the upper radiator hose joins the engine. It helps the engine warm up quickly when started by blocking the flow of coolant back to the radiator until the engine reaches operating temperature.

That's hotter than Georgia asphalt. Without the cooling system in good working order your oil would evaporate in seconds and your engine would melt.

Meanwhile, the radiator cap keeps the coolant under pressure to raise its boiling point, and allows excess coolant to escape in a controlled manner in case the engine boils over. Let a hot engine cool for at least 20 minutes before opening the radiator cap to avoid being scalded by superheated liquid.

You should make regular inspections of your cooling system to ensure it is in good condition. Here are some things to look for:

• If your car has a coolant recovery tank, check its level. Top it off with fresh coolant if it is below the level mark. If it is dry or if you don't have a recovery tank, allow the engine to cool and then remove the radiator cap by pushing down with the heel of your hand and then twisting in a counter-clockwise direction.

Look at the cap itself for cracks in the seal; if you find any, replace the cap. Check the coolant level; it should be about 2 inches below the filler neck in a crossflow radiator and about 1 inch in a downflow radiator. To determine what kind of radiator you have, check to see what direction the tubes go down or crosswise.

• If the coolant is dark in color or rusty, drain it and replace it with fresh liquid. Foaming or bubbles indicates air in the system; look for leaks in the hoses or a loose clamp.

• Check the metal fins of your radiator and remove any leaves or twigs that may impede the flow of air. Use water from your garden hose (at low pressure) to wash out the fins.

• Run a finger across the fins; if any of the metal pieces collapse as you do that, have it checked by a professional. You may need to replace the radiator with a new one.

• Draining a radiator is easy but can be a little messy. Put a plastic bucket or basin under the radiator after the coolant valve is cooled. Open the petcock valve at the bottom of the radiator with a pin. It is stuck try some spray lubricant or penetrating oil but be careful not to break the valve. It's expensive to replace.

Some radiators have a drain plug that can be unscrewed with a wrench. Once the radiator has been drained completely, close the petcock valve or screw in the plug.

• You can flush the system with a garden hose after you have drained out all the old coolant. You may need to drain and fill the radiator several times to really clean it out. Run the engine for a few minutes after each fill to circulate the liquid. When the water is completely clear, top off the radiator with the proper amount of antifreeze.

• A hydrometer will tell you if you have enough antifreeze in your system. You can buy one in an auto supply store or get a mechanic to run an antifreeze test for a nominal fee.

• Keep an eye on all your hoses and clamps and replace them if they are worn, damaged, dry rotted or leaky.
